

Player Profile: Lavvie Dilweg

INTRODUCTION

Lavvie Dilweg was considered one of the best all-around ends in pro football prior to Don Hutson, the man who replaced Dilweg on the Green Bay Packers when Dilweg retired after the 1934 season. As a result of Hutson's outstanding career, Dilweg's name is all but forgotten. One of the main reasons for this is that Dilweg was not a flashy player. However, Dilweg's career deserves recognition. He was a consistent player who could clear out blockers for his teammates, or tackle any runner near him.

Laverne Ralph Dilweg was born November 1, 1903 (most encyclopedias have his birthdate as January 11, but that is incorrect) in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Throughout his football career, he stayed local. He played high school football at Washington High School in Milwaukee. He attended Marquette University for his undergraduate degree and for law school, leading the football team to a 28-4-1 record during his tenure. He was twice named to Walter Eckersall's All-America team. Eckersall was a well-respected football authority who wrote for the Chicago Tribune. Dilweg also played in the first East-West Shrine Game in 1925.

In 1926, the 6'3", 199-pound Dilweg joined the Milwaukee Badgers of the National Football League. He was an outstanding player on a mediocre team. The Badgers folded after the 1926 season and Dilweg signed with the Green Bay Packers, who won three championships in the eight years on what was considered the greatest team at the time. Over his nine seasons – an unusually long career at the time – Dilweg made at least one all-pro team every year except for his final season.

Dilweg graduated from Marquette University School of Law in 1927 and practiced law while he played for the Packers. After his retirement from pro football in 1934, Dilweg devoted his time to his law practice. In 1942, he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives. He served one term, but continued his law career until his death on June 2, 1968 in St. Petersburg, Florida.

FILM STUDY AND ANALYSIS (By Ken Crippen and Matt Reaser)

On defense, Dilweg was extremely quick off the ball and was able to shed blocks to easily get into the offensive backfield. He had very good to excellent straight-line speed. Dilweg could close the distance between himself and the passer/runner very quickly. He didn't always chase plays to the opposite side of the field, but when the play was in front of him, he reacted extremely quickly and was able to close on the play fast. He typically lined up between the seven-technique and nine-technique positions on the left side of the defensive line.

On offense, he was an efficient blocker, but tended to screen the defender more than block the defender. However, he did have the ability to push the defender back and turned him away from the play. He showed very good route-running abilities, and quickly made cuts with excellent footwork.

STATISTICS

NOTE: See Appendix for detailed statistics

Let's expand the analysis and compare him to all pre-modern era ends in the Hall of Fame. They include: Red Badgro, Ray Flaherty, Bill Hewitt, Wayne Millner, Guy Chamberlin, George Halas and Don Hutson. Ray Flaherty was inducted more as a coach than end. Halas was inducted as a coach, owner and founder of the league, not for his play at end, however Halas did have a good career at end. Chamberlin was inducted both as a coach and end. That leaves Badgro, Hewitt, Millner and Hutson as the only players inducted strictly for their play at end, but I will still include Chamberlin and Halas in the analysis. Keep in mind while looking at these statistics, it was not until the late 1930s when the passing game really took off. Therefore, all players from the late 1930s and early 1940s would have benefited from increased passing attempts. Dilweg does not fall within that category.

Years in the League:

Don Hutson – 11 (1935-1945)

Lavvie Dilweg – 9 (1926-1934)

George Halas – 9 (1920-1928)

Bill Hewitt – 9 (1932-1943)

Guy Chamberlin – 8 (1920-1927)

Red Badgro – 7 (1927-1936)

Wayne Millner – 7 (1936-1941, 1945)

Receiving Touchdowns:

Don Hutson – 99

Bill Hewitt – 23

Lavvie Dilweg – 12

Wayne Millner – 12

Guy Chamberlin – 8

Red Badgro – 7

George Halas – 6

Total Offensive Touchdowns:

Don Hutson – 102

Bill Hewitt – 24

Lavvie Dilweg – 12

Wayne Millner – 12
 Guy Chamberlin – 11
 Red Badgro – 7
 George Halas 7

Interceptions for Touchdowns:

Guy Chamberlin – 3
Lavvie Dilweg – 2
 George Halas – 1
 Don Hutson – 1
 Red Badgro – 0
 Bill Hewitt – 0
 Wayne Millner – 0

As one can see, Dilweg ranks in the upper half of all of these statistical categories. All are in the Hall of Fame, except Dilweg. In fact, the entire All-Decade team of the 1920s is in the Pro Football Hall of Fame, except for Dilweg and Hunk Anderson.

The table below illustrates how he ranks with the predominant ends of his day.

HONORS

Dilweg was named to the Pro Football Hall of Fame’s All-1920s team at end, along with Guy Chamberlin and George Halas. Let’s compare Dilweg to the other two selections. Dilweg was consensus all-pro six times during his career, while Chamberlin was named consensus all-pro three times and Halas was never consensus all-pro. Even if the 1930s all-pro selections were removed from Dilweg’s resume, he was still named consensus all-pro four times in the 1920s; more than Chamberlin and Halas combined, yet Dilweg only played the last half of the decade (four years for Dilweg, eight years for Chamberlin and nine years for Halas).

To give you an idea of his consistency, Dilweg was named consensus all-pro for six consecutive years, with four of those years being unanimous all-pro. From 1920 through 1950, only one other player at that position was able to match that accomplishment: Don Hutson with ten. Mac Speedie had four consecutive consensus all-pro selections and Bill Hewitt had three. The remainder of ends who played during that timeframe had no more than two consecutive consensus all-pro selections. None of that would make a highlight film, but players, coaches and the media of his day knew that Dilweg was the best.

Testimonials

Legendary football historian Bob Carroll (founder and long-time executive director of the Professional Football Researchers Association) stated, "You could make the case that the stuff he did after football was a little more important in the whole scheme of things than playing end for the Green Bay Packers. And none of that changes the fact that at a particular time and place in the long history of football, nobody played end better than Dilweg."

The editors of Total Football: The Official Encyclopedia of the National Football League listed Dilweg as one of the 300 Greatest Players of All-Time, stating, "Lavern Dilweg, by nearly all contemporary accounts, was the best end in pro football almost from his first game in 1926 until his last in 1934."

Author John Maxymuk stated in his book Packers by the Numbers, "Overall, he was consistently excellent...Dilweg deserves to be in the Pro Football Hall of Fame as the finest end of his era by far."

In The Hidden Game of Football: The Next Edition, authors Bob Carroll, Pete Palmer, John Thorn and David Pietrusza developed a rating system used to rank early players based on total number of years played, number of championship seasons, and all-pro selections. Dilweg was in the first group of players, which the authors commented, “the first group represents those players who would seem to have all the necessities for Hall of Fame selection.” Of the three ends in the first group, Dilweg was ranked below Don Hutson and ahead of Bill Hewitt, both members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Hall of Fame ends Guy Chamberlin, Ray Flaherty, Red Badgro, George Halas and Wayne Millner did not make the first group.

Hall of Fame member Red Grange stated: “I have always rated Dilweg as the greatest end who ever brought me down.”

Hall of Fame member Cal Hubbard named Dilweg as a member of his All-Time All-Star team.

Hall of Fame member Bronko Nagurski named Dilweg to his All-Time All-Star team.

Harold ‘Brick’ Muller: “[Dilweg was] one of the best players I ever faced on the football field.”

Jack Rudolph of the Green Bay Press-Gazette: “Lavvie Dilweg was one of the finest ends who ever played professional football...What made Dilweg great – a quality that can’t be measured in statistics – was his steady dependability.”

Wilfrid Smith of the Chicago Tribune: “[Dilweg] has no peer.”
